Conversations with My Daughter What is sex, daddy?

Unknown date and time; possibly Fall of 2007

T: What is sex daddy?

Dad: Where did you hear that?

T: Umm, "Friends" show.

Dad: When did you watch "Friends"?

T: The other night.

Dad: WHEN?

T: Monday.

Dad: Which Monday?

T: No Thursday.

Dad: Where was I?

T: I don't know dad, at work.

Dad: Where was M.?

T: Umm, Here

Dad: "Friends" is not a show for kids.

T: Oh, I know.

Dad: Why did she let you watch it then?

T: No! I watched it myself.

Dad: Did you ask her what it meant?

T: No. she was talking on the phone.

Dad: Did you ask anyone else what it meant?

T: No.

Dad: Great! She's busy talking on the phone; you watch grown up shows on TV...

T: It's funny dad.

Dad: I don't care if it's funny; it's for grownups. It's not a show appropriate for kids your age.

T: Are you mad at me?

Dad: Yes I am.

T: Are you mad at her too?

Dad: I'm not sure. It seems to be your problem now.

T: What daddy?

Dad: If I knew about it then, I would have mentioned it to her. By not telling me about it when it happened you made it your own responsibility. Now, it's your problem. Do you understand?

T: Am I grounded?

Dad: What is grounded?

T: I don't know.

Dad: Never mind being grounded. What was the show about?

T: Oh, Ross had sex with another woman.

Dad: Oh Great!

T: Yes. He kissed her for a long time and slept next to her.

Dad: So you know what it is!

T: Sex is when two people kiss each other for a long time and sleep next to each other.

Dad: Right! Sex is, also, a stage in life that comes after you graduate from medical school. You know pre-school, Kindergarten, lower school, middle school, high school, college, medical school, so on and so forth. You know those stages. Right?

T: Yes. I know. Sex is like a butterfly.

Dad: A butterfly! Right. Tell me how.

T: First it's an egg; then it's a caterpillar, then it becomes a chrysalis, after that it becomes a butterfly.

Dad: EXACTLY! Now can a butterfly be a chrysalis after it's an egg.

T: NO! First it has to become a caterpillar.

Dad: Can a person go to middle school after graduating from Kindergarten?

T: NO! First she has to finish lower school.

Dad: Can a person have sex after high school?

T: NO! First she has to go to college. Daddy, everyone goes to medical school?

Dad: No. some people go to law school and some others go to business school...

T: And some people go to architecture school.

Dad: Exactly. There are many possibilities to choose from. What you need to pay attention is the natural cycle of it; the natural order. You can't force anything out of its natural cycle.
